Fireside Chat with Amy Trask, Former CEO of the Oakland Raiders & NFL Analyst

Amy Trask has had many titles during her career: chief executive, analyst, and author. The former CEO of the Oakland Raiders, and current football analyst for CBS Sports Network, now serves as Chairman of the Board of Ice Cube's BIG3. During her time with the Raiders, Trask was the highest-ranking female executive in the NFL. She spent almost 30 years with the Raiders organization, where she became the NFL's first female front-office executive and was one of the highest-ranking women in American professional sports. Since 2013, Trask's role with football extended to television as a studio analyst for CBS Sports Network on THAT OTHER PREGAME SHOW. She also serves as a panelist on WE NEED TO TALK, the first-ever nationally televised all-female sports show and contributes to THE NFL TODAY on CBS. In her book, You Negotiate Like a Girl: Reflections on a Career in the National Football League (Triumph Books, 2016), Trask shared her experience as the highest-ranking female executive in the league. Trask serves on the advisory board of directors for Tony La Russa's Animal Rescue Foundation and the Los Angeles Sports and Entertainment Commission.

Managing Construction and Labor Costs

Location: Vista Ballroom

Optimizing performance of a development project is fraught with challenges. Unforeseen costs, including those pertaining to the cost of materials and labor, can threaten the completion of a project. This development risk is felt the hardest in student housing where timely delivery is the difference between achieving pro-forma case estimates or misfortune. How are companies delivering on time and budget while managing these issues and the risks they bring? This session will show how property owners can navigate, plan, and immediately implement initiatives to help keep projects on track.

Building 2.0: Making Cents of New Technologies

Location: Fountain Room

Technology enables buildings of the future to perceive what owners and residents want, whether that be comfort, savings, safety, risk mitigation or efficiency. But chasing the “latest and greatest” technology is not the basis for making smart decisions. Instead, student housing companies must make investments that yield positive returns and, in many cases, reflect attributes demanded by investors from a design and sustainability perspective. This panel will provide insights into how to make design and technological investments that boost the financial value of student housing communities.

Managing Risk to Protect the Bottom Line

Location: Fountain Room

Destructive hurricanes, terrorism, cyber-attacks, apartment fires—just some of the many threats our industry faces on a daily basis. Each reminds us that managing risk has become mission critical throughout the enterprise—especially at the C-Suite level. Insurance industry experts will discuss trends they are seeing in the multifamily insurance market, how risk and premiums are being assessed and steps you can take to lessen your company’s exposure. As owners and operators, it is critical that you work to protect the bottom line and try to mitigate the financial risks posed by new technologies, extreme weather events, and even man-made catastrophes. It’s more important than ever that the C-Suite pursue cutting edge solutions to protect revenue.

NMHC Research – Comparative Analysis of the Cost of Housing Options for Students

Student housing properties have become known for their luxurious amenities and state-of-the-art finishes. As this reputation has emerged and the cost of earning a college degree has continued to rise, affordability of these amenity-rich housing options has been brought into question. This report examines the cost differences between on-campus and off-campus housing options: specifically, purpose-built student housing, on-campus housing, and conventional market-rate/student competitive apartments. Additionally, this study presents a general assessment of affordability and how amenities, proximity to campus, bedroom offerings, age of the building, and the type of university influence rental rates.
